Dear Dr Parry,

Re: Mr Brian Wallis
DOB: 1956-12-02
Address: 16 Currajong Avenue, SELBY VIC 3159

Summary

- Significant improvement in oesophageal symptoms Jackhammer oesophagus with current medical therapy.
- Dose escalation of smooth muscle relaxant (diltiazem) to 60mg for further symptomatic control.
- For review via telehealth in 12 months.
- No action required by you.

I had the pleasure of conducting a telehealth review with Brian Wallis. He has noted a marked improvement in his symptoms since commencing treatment. Previously, he was experiencing episodes two to three times per week; however, these have now reduced to approximately one to two episodes per month. He continues to experience a mild cough, but his voice remains unaffected, and he has not reported any adverse effects such as lightheadedness or hypotension.

The clinical response indicates that Brian's symptoms are responsive to smooth muscle relaxants. We discussed the rationale for his treatment, noting that while diltiazem is often used for angina or hypertension, its effect on the smooth muscle of the oesophagus is the primary goal here. Given the partial but incomplete resolution of symptoms, we discussed a trial of dose titration to achieve complete symptomatic relief, provided he does not develop side effects such as constipation or significant blood pressure changes.

FOCUS
GASTROENTEROLOGY

I have increased Brian's dose of diltiazem from 30mg to 60mg daily. To utilise his current supply, I have advised him to take his 30mg tablets twice daily until the box is finished, before transitioning to the 60mg once-daily formulation. We intend to continue this pharmacological management for a period of six to twelve months.

As Brian is relocating, I have scheduled a follow-up review via telehealth in 12 months' time. I have asked him to contact me sooner if he experiences any side effects or if his symptoms fail to improve on the higher dose. I have also provided him with a repeat prescription for his Nexium to ensure continuity of his current gastrointestinal regimen.

Kind regards

Yours sincerely,
