Summary

- Ulcerative colitis in clinical remission on infliximab.
- Breast pain investigated by ultrasound; likely unrelated to biologic therapy.
- Surveillance colonoscopy planned for late 2026 or early 2027.
- No action required by you.

I had the pleasure of conducting a review with Elda regarding her ulcerative colitis. I am pleased to report that she is doing exceptionally well. She remains in clinical remission with no reports of diarrhoea, mucus, or haematochezia. Her energy levels are excellent, and while she noted some minor nausea, this does not appear to be interfering with her daily life or appetite.

We discussed a recent symptom of breast pain. I note that you have already performed a breast ultrasound, which is reassuring. I do not believe this pain is related to her infliximab infusions. I have advised her that evening primrose oil is perfectly safe to use from a gastrointestinal perspective should she wish to trial it for symptomatic relief.

Elda continues to receive her infliximab infusions every eight weeks at St Vincent's. While we discussed the alternative of transitioning to subcutaneous home injections every fortnight, she is currently satisfied with the hospital-based infusion arrangement.

Impression and Plan Elda remains stable on her current biologic regimen. I have requested blood tests and a faecal calprotectin to objectively confirm her remission status. I intend to monitor these results every six months while she is on infliximab. I have provided her with pathology forms for a current set of tests and a subsequent set to be completed prior to our next review. We will likely schedule her next surveillance colonoscopy for late 2026 or early 2027. I have asked her to follow up with me in six months' time.

Yours sincerely,

A/Prof Chamara Basnayake
