Summary

- Recurrent haematochezia and lower abdominal pain.
- For colonoscopy on to investigate for inflammatory bowel disease versus haemorrhoidal pathology.
- No action required by you.

I had the pleasure of conducting a clinical review with Maisara Hussein. Our review was delayed from December due to her recent travel and commitments to motherhood.

Maisara reports a recurrence of rectal bleeding that has been occurring intermittently since December. She describes a pattern where the bleeding may occur daily for several weeks before a brief period of quiescence. The blood is reportedly mixed with the stool and is also noted on the tissue upon wiping. These episodes are associated with the passage of mucus, though she notes no mucus is present when the stools are non-bloody. Her bowel habit is currently soft.

In addition to the bleeding, Maisara has been experiencing daily lower abdominal discomfort since January. She describes this as a dull, aching sensation that improves slightly following defaecation but typically returns shortly thereafter. Importantly, she denies any nocturnal symptoms that wake her from sleep and reports no symptoms of gastroesophageal reflux.

Impression and Plan

While Maisara has previously undergone flexible sigmoidoscopy, her ongoing symptoms of haematochezia, mucus, and altered abdominal comfort necessitate a formal colonoscopy to exclude or confirm a flare of inflammatory bowel disease versus symptomatic internal haemorrhoids. If she does indeed have a mild form of proctitis or colitis, I have reassured her that this remains highly treatable.

I have scheduled Maisara for a colonoscopy on Saturday, 9 May at St Vincent's Private Hospital. We have discussed the requirements for bowel preparation and she is familiar with the process. I will review her following the procedure to discuss the findings and any required histopathology.
