Summary

- Persistent upper gastrointestinal pain.
- Cessation of nortriptyline for two months due to psychosocial stressors.
- Recent pathology results within normal limits.
- Referral for gastroscopy at St Vincent's Hospital and repeat abdominal ultrasound.
- No action required by you.

I had the pleasure of conducting a review with Nayyere regarding her persistent upper gastrointestinal pain. She was accompanied by a family member who assisted with the history.

Nayyere has recently experienced significant life events that have acted as a distraction, leading to the cessation of her regular medications, including nortriptyline, for the past two months. While she noted some fluctuation in her symptoms, she clarified that her pain was better controlled while she was adherent to the medication. We discussed the impact of stress on pain perception and the efficacy of this treatment in managing her specific symptoms.

I have reviewed her recent pathology results from Clinical Labs, which show no significant abnormalities. Her last abdominal ultrasound was performed over twelve months ago, and therefore a repeat scan is now due to evaluate her liver and surrounding structures.

Impression and Plan Given Nayyere's age and the persistence of her symptoms, a gastroscopy is clinically indicated. I have organised a referral for this to be performed through the public system at St Vincent's Hospital. I have explained that while I will submit the paperwork, the procedure may be performed by another qualified member of the gastroenterology team.

I have requested that Nayyere restart her nortriptyline at a dose of one tablet at night, as she previously found this beneficial. I have provided her with requests for a repeat abdominal ultrasound and interval pathology. I intend to review her in six months' time, once the imaging and gastroscopy have been completed.

Kind regards
