Summary

- Crohn's disease in biochemical remission.
- Faecal calprotectin 95 with normal blood pathology.
- For influenza and non-live shingles (Shingrix) vaccinations.
- No action required by you.

I had the pleasure of conducting a telehealth review with Monique. While she continues to struggle significantly with her quality of life due to chronic spinal pain and limited mobility, her Crohn's disease remains stable. I was pleased to hear that she has successfully gained several kilograms over the last six months, which is a significant improvement given her previous underweight status.

In terms of her inflammatory bowel disease, Monique's recent investigations are very reassuring. Her faecal calprotectin is 95, and her blood tests are entirely normal. She continues to receive Steqeyma injections, which appear to be effective, and she remains on Temgesic for pain management.

We discussed the importance of preventative health and vaccinations while on immunosuppressive therapy. I have encouraged Monique to remain up to date with her influenza vaccination. We also discussed the Shingrix vaccine for shingles. I have advised her that she must only receive the non-live version. Given her level of immunosuppression, I believe she is an appropriate candidate, though I have noted this may require a private prescription.

Impression and Plan Monique is currently in clinical and biochemical remission. I have asked her to continue with her current Steqeyma regimen. I have provided her with a pathology request for a repeat faecal calprotectin and blood tests to be completed prior to her next review in six months' time.

Yours sincerely,

A/Prof Chamara Basnayake
